Kari Chisholm In a state where the Democratic nomination is tantamount to election, primary endorsements would seem to be the only opportunity for organizations to influence the outcome.

John Calhoun replied · 3 Replies

Kari Chisholm I guess it's an interesting and non-trivial question: what responsibility, if any, do interest groups have to partisan politics?

If you're, say, the Oregonians for Hugging Trees, shouldn't you evaluate the candidates on their tree-hugging records? What does D or R have to do with it?

January 30 at 3:46pm · Edited

Kari Chisholm replied · 3 Replies

John Calhoun Kari Chisholm when I discussed the Ted Wheeler/Diane Linn issue with OLCV they were forthright that it was a loyalty issue based upon passed votes, not a choice of who was best going forward. I have heard the same from others. Endorsements to political groups is about loyalty, but voters think it is about quality of the candidate. That is what bothers me.
